A spectrograph is an instrument that separates light by its wavelengths and records this data. A spectrograph typically has a multi-channel detector system or camera that detects and records the spectrum of light. The term was first used in 1876 by Dr. Henry Draper when he invented the earliest version of this device, and which he used to take several photographs of the spectrum of Vega.

This article is a rebuttal to the article Modern Medicine Has Given Illness Care a Miss by Dr. B.M. Hegde in the Open Page of The Hindu, dated February 18th, 2012. (The piece is in fact recycled from this almost identical piece by him from November 2010.). Dr. Hegde begins his article with some quotations by famous people, and offers them as evidence that medicine in the past was better than ...

No, I haven't turned to the dark-side, but rather I am transcending sides. This article is probably the most important piece I have written to date, and in order to convey the full message, a bit of back-story is necessary. Hang in there with me, and by the end you will understand why I will never call myself a "lightworker" again.
